

TAKE CONTROL OF YOUR GMAT® EXPERIENCE

WHAT:

The GMAT Enhanced Score Report (ESR) provides test takers with a comprehensive set of post-exam diagnostics including rankings, response times, question performance, and a customized summary that gives test takers more confidence and control.

WHY:

The GMAT ESR will help you better understand your performance on the exam and its potential impact on your graduate school applications. It can help you speak to admissions staff about your skills, help you focus on improving skills before arriving to the classroom or, should you decide, help you focus your preparation efforts for a future sitting of the exam. Whatever decision or direction you decide to take, you will benefit from understanding how you performed, how you ranked, and how you managed your time.

BENEFITS:

- Timing is everything. Spend more time where you need it and less time where you don't. Your ESR makes it easy to see what question types you're spending the most time on for more effective time management.
- Fine-tune your decision making. Pinpoint your strengths and weaknesses to make your studies more effective and efficient. Your ESR provides an in-depth breakdown by subject and section to give you a complete overview of how you're doing.
- Boost your confidence. Go in to your next GMAT exam armed with the confidence that comes from being prepared. Use your ESR as an integral part of your preparation to get your best score.

WHO:

Every test taker can use their report differently. If you're considering retaking the GMAT exam, getting ready to enter a new program, preparing for an admissions interview, determining which programs to apply to, your ESR can give you the information you need to reach your personal and professional goals.

AVAILABILITY:

The GMAT Enhanced Score Report is available for exams completed after October 1, 2013.
